Publication Strategies for Young Researchers: A Journal Editors' Roundtable

When is my research paper ready to be published in a scholarly journal? Does it matter to which journal I submit my paper? May I send it to several journals? How does the peer review process work? How long does it take? What can I do to boost the chances that my paper will get constructive criticisms from reviewers and an invitation to revise and resubmit?

At this roundtable event for doctoral candidates, postdocs and junior faculty, three experienced journal editors will provide an introduction to publishing in political science and interdisciplinary social science journals, as well as advice on what to do and what to avoid in preparing manuscripts for submission to selective, peer-reviewed journals. Rittberger, Levi-Faur, and Büthe will each offer introductory remarks, then take questions.

Prof. Dr. Berthold Rittberger, Chair for International Relations at the Geschwister-Scholl-Institute for Political Science at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, München, is the co-editor-in-chief of the Journal of European Public Policy.

Prof. Dr. David Levi-Faur, Professor of Regulatory Governance and Policy in the Department of Political Science and the School of Public Policy at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem is the founding editor and remains co-editor-in-chief of Regulation and Governance.

Prof. Dr. Tim Büthe, Chair for International Relations at the Hochschule für Politik and TUM School of Management at the Technical University of Munich (TUM), is an associate editor of Business and Politics. From 2015 through 2018, he was the co-editor-in-chief of Qualitative and Multi-Method Research.
