David Levi-Faur is professor of regulatory governance and policy in the Department of Political Science and the School of Public Policy at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is the editor of the Oxford Handbook of Governance (OUP, 2012) and the Handbook of the Politics of Regulation (Edward Elgar, 2011). He is currently working on a book project and an Oxford Handbook on the Regulation of Emerging Technologies. Levi-Faur’s book manuscript in progress covers the regulatory implications of Big Financial Data and asserts the social innovations potential of the use of big financial data for welfare governance. In doing so, the manuscript deals with the trends, purposes and dilemmas of governance in the 21st century. Levi-Faur is the founding editor of Regulation & Governance, an interdisciplinary top journal that serves as the leading platform for the study of regulation and governance in the social sciences. He holds a Ph.D. and MA in Political Science from the University of Haifa and a Social Science undergraduate degree from the Open University of Israel.
